

UNITED STATES OF AMERICA
BEFORE THE NATIONAL LABOR RELATIONS BOARD, DIVISION OF JUDGES

TBC CORPORATION and RETAIL GROUP, INC.,
a wholly-owned subsidiary of
TBC CORPORATION

and

LUIS RODRIGUEZ, an Individual

CASE 12-CA-157478
12-CA-170543

RESPONDENTS TBC CORPORATION AND TBC RETAIL GROUP'S POST-TRIAL BRIEF TO THE ADMINISTRATIVE LAW JUDGE

Submitted by:

Shane T. Muñoz
Florida Bar No. 67024
smunoz@fordharrison.com

Nicole Bermel Dunlap
Florida Bar No. 116158
ndunlap@fordharrison.com

FORDHARRISON LLP
101 E. Kennedy Boulevard, Suite 900
Tampa, Florida 33602-5133
Telephone: (813) 261-7800
Facsimile: (813) 261-7899

Attorneys for TBC Corporation and TBC
Retail Group, Inc.

TABLE OF CONTENTS

I.	TABLE OF AUTHORITIES	IV
II.	INTRODUCTION	1
III.	STATEMENT OF FACTS	2
	A. Procedural History.	2
	B. Facts Relevant to Respondents’ No-Solicitation Policy	3
	C. Facts Relevant to Respondents’ Arbitration Agreement.	5
IV.	LEGAL ANALYSIS—RESPONDENT’S NO-SOLICITATION PROVISIONS	8
	A. Respondents’ Current No-Solicitation Policy and Associate Handbook Provision Are Lawful under the NLRA.	8
	B. Respondents Effectively Repudiated any Allegedly Unlawful No Solicitation Provision.....	8
V.	LEGAL ANALYSIS—RESPONDENTS’ ARBITRATION AGREEMENT	12
	A. Supreme Court Precedent Prohibits the ALJ and the Board from Considering the Enforceability of Respondents’ Arbitration Agreement Because it Contains a Lawful Delegation Clause.	12
	B. Respondents’ Arbitration Agreement Is Lawful Under the NLRA.	13
	1. Burden of Proof.....	13
	2. Respondents’ Arbitration Agreement is Lawful because it Expressly Permits the Filing of Administrative Charges.....	13
	3. Arbitration Agreements with Class Action Waivers Are Lawful.	14
	a. The Current Status of the Law Regarding Class Action Waivers.	14
	b. Employees Can Lawfully Waive Their Ability to Participate in Collective Litigation Because it is a Procedural, and Not a Substantive, Right.	15
	(1) Established Law, Including Supreme Court Decisions, Reflect that Any Right to Collective Adjudication is Procedural, Not Substantive.....	16
	(2) The Board’s Own Internal Litigation Procedures Contradict its Interpretation That the Act Creates a Substantive Right for Employees to Pursue Collective Adjudication.....	18

TABLE OF CONTENTS

(continued)

(3)	The Authority the Board Relies Upon Does Not Support its Argument that Collective Adjudication is a Substantive Right.....	20
(a)	The NLRB’s Reliance on Caselaw, Specifically Eastex, Inc. v. NLRB , 437 U.S. 556 (1978) is Misplaced.	20
(b)	The NLRB’s Reliance on the Norris-LaGuardia Act is Misplaced.	23
c.	Section 8(a)(1) of the Act Only Prohibits Individual Employment Agreements That Restrain Employees’ Rights to Organize and Bargain Collectively and Does Not Prohibit Individual Agreements that May Extinguish Some Rights Under the Act.	24
d.	The Board Must Consider Employers’ Substantial Business Justification for Prohibiting Class Arbitration.....	25
C.	Even Assuming the NLRA Prohibits Class Action Waivers, the Federal Arbitration Act Requires that the Arbitration Agreement Be Enforced According to its Terms.	28
1.	The Board’s D.R. Horton Rule Does Not Fall Within the FAA’s Savings Clause.	29
2.	The NLRA Does Not Contain Any “Contrary Congressional Command” Sufficient to Override the FAA.	31
D.	Under the First Amendment, Employers have the Right to Enforce Arbitration Agreements Judicially.	34
E.	Section 9(a) of the Act Protects’ Employees’ Rights to Adjust Grievances Individually.	35
F.	The Doctrines of Res Judicata, Collateral Estoppel, Laches, and/or Waiver Preclude any Re-Evaluation by the ALJ of the Federal Court’s Determination that the Arbitration Agreement is Valid and Enforceable.	36
G.	The Remedies Sought in the Complaint Are Inappropriate.....	40
1.	Pursuant to the Arbitration Agreement’s Severability Clause, other Aspects of the Arbitration Agreement Should Be Enforced Even if the Class Action Waiver is Determined to be Unlawful.....	41
2.	Any Remedial Order Should Be Limited to Non-Supervisory Employees.	42

TABLE OF CONTENTS

(continued)

3.	Neither Charging Party Nor the Plaintiffs In the Federal Court Litigation Should Be Awarded Any Attorneys' Fees or Litigation Expenses for Opposing Respondent's Class Action Waiver.....	42
VI.	CONCLUSION.....	44

I. TABLE OF AUTHORITIES

Federal Court Cases

14 Penn Plaza LLC v. Pyett , 556 U.S. 247 (2009)	16
Adkins v. Labor Ready, Inc. , 303 F.3d 496 (4th Cir. 2002)	18
Altex Ready Mixed Concrete Corp. v. NLRB , 542 F.2d 295 (5th Cir. 1976)	21
Amchem Prods., Inc. v. Windsor , 521 U.S. 591 (1997)	16
American Express Co. v. Italian Colors Rest. , 133 S. Ct. 2304 (2013)	17, 28, 29, 33, 40
AT&T Mobility LLC v. Concepcion , 563 U.S. 333 (2011)	26-31
Atlas Logistics Retail Group Retail Services , 357 NLRB No. 37 (2011)	10, 11
BE & K Construction Co. v. NLRB , 536 U.S. 516 (2002)	34, 35
Beverly Health and Rehab Servs., Inc. v. NLRB , 317 F.3d 316 (D.C. Cir. 2003)	37
Bill Johnson's Restaurants v. NLRB , 461 U.S. 731 (1983)	35
Carter v. Countrywide Credit Indus., Inc. , 362 F.3d 294 (5th Cir. 2004)	17, 32
Cellular Sales of Missouri, LLC, v. NLRB , 824 F.3d 772 (8th Cir. 2016)	15
Wal-Mart Stores, Inc. v. Dukes , 564 U.S. (2011)	18
Circuit City Stores, Inc. v. Adams , 532 U.S. 105 (2001)	15
CompuCredit Corp. v. Greenwood , 132 S. Ct. 665 (2012)	28, 32-33
D.R. Horton , 737 F.3d 344 (5th Cir. 2013)	14-15, 24, 29, 31, 32, 34
Davis v. United States , 417 U.S. 333 (1974)	15
De Oliveira v. Citicorp N. Am., Inc. , No. 8:12-cv-251-T-26TGW, 2012 WL 1831230 (M.D. Fla. 2012)	34
Deposit Guar. Nat'l Bank v. Roper , 445 U.S. 326 (1980)	16
Eastex, Inc. v. NLRB , 437 U.S. 556 (1978)	20, 21, 22

TABLE OF AUTHORITIES

(continued)

Gilmer v. Interstate/Johnson Lane Corp. , 500 U.S. 20 (1991).....	13, 17, 32, 33, 40
In re Tax Serv. Ass’n of Illinois , 305 U.S. 160 (1938).....	15
Int’l Union, United Auto. Aerospace and Agr. Implement Workers of America AFL-CIO v. Scofield , 382 U.S. 205 (1965).....	37
J.I. Case Co. v. NLRB , 321 U.S. 332 (1944)	24, 25
Jeannette Corp. v. NLRB , 532 F.2d 916 (3d Cir. 1976)	26
Kuehner v. Dickinson & Co. , 84 F.3d 316 (9th Cir. 1996).....	18
Lechmere, Inc. v. NLRB , 502 U.S. 527 (1992)	24
Lewis v. Epic Systems, Corp , 823 F.3d 1147 (7th Cir. 2016)	15
Montana v. United States , 440 U.S. 147 (1979)	37
Morris v. Ernst & Young, LLP , No. 13-16599, 2016 WL 4433080 (9th Cir. 2016)	15
Moses H. Cone Mem’l Hosp. v. Mercury Constr. Corp. , 460 U.S. 1 (1983).....	28
Murphy Oil U.S.A. Inc. v. NLRB 808 F.3d 1013 (5th Cir. 2015).....	15, 34, 36
Nash v. Florida Industrial Comm’n , 389 U.S. 235 (1967)	18
National Licorice Co. v. NLRB , 309 U.S. 350 (1940)	24, 25
Nevada Comm’n on Ethics v. Carrigan , 564 U.S. 117 (2011)	40
NLRB v. Donna-Lee Sportswear , 836 F.2d 31 (1st Cir. 1987)	39
NLRB v. Fleetwood Trailer Co , 389 U.S. 375 (1967)	26
NLRB v. Fort Vancouver Plywood Co. , 604 F.2d 596 (9th Cir. 1979).....	42
NLRB v. Great Dane Trailers , 388 U.S. 26 (1967)	26
NLRB v. Heyman , 431 F.2d (9th Cir. 1976).....	39
Owen v. Bristol Care, Inc. , 702 F.3d 1050 (8th Cir. 2013)	15, 17, 34

TABLE OF AUTHORITIES

(continued)

Patterson v. Raymours Furniture Co., Inc. , No. 15-2820-CV, 2016 WL 4598542 (2d Cir. 2016)	15
Rent-A-Center, West, Inc. v. Jackson , 561 U.S. 63 (2010)	1, 12, 41-42
Richards v. Ernst & Young , 744 F. 3d 1072 (9th Cir. 2013)	34
Rodriguez de Quijas v. Shearson/Am. Express, Inc. , 490 U.S. 477 (1989)	32
Shearson/Am. Express, Inc. v. McMahon , 482 U.S. 220 (1987)	32
Sutherland v. Ernst & Young LLP , 726 F.3d 290 (2d Cir. 2013)	15, 17, 34
Walthour v. Chipio Windshield Repair, LLC , 745 F.3d 1326 (11th Cir.)	13, 17, 34, 40
Welch v. United States , 136 S. Ct. 1257 (2016)	16

NLRB Cases

Alleluia Cushion Co. , 221 NLRB 999 (1975)	21
Atlas Logistics Retail Group Retail Services , 357 NLRB No. 37 (2011)	10, 11
D.R. Horton , 357 NLRB No. 184 (2012)	1, 7, 13, 25-26, 31, 34-35, 38-40, 43
Iowa Beef Packers, Inc. , 144 NLRB 615 (1963)	12
King Soopers, Inc. , 222 NLRB 1011 (1976)	21
Lutheran Heritage Village – Livonia , 343 NLRB 646 (2004)	13
McDonnell Douglas Corp. , 270 NLRB 1204 (1984)	36
Murphy Oil U.S.A., Inc. , 361 NLRB No. 72 (2014)	1, 7, 14-15, 18-20, 22-26, 34-35, 38-39, 43
Our Way, Inc. , 268 NLRB 394 (1983)	8
Passavant Memorial Area Hospital , 237 NLRB 138 (1978)	1, 8
Routre Bertrand Dupoint, Inc. , 271 NLRB , 443 (1984)	13
Sabine Towing & Transportation Co. , 263 NLRB 114 (1982)	37
Socony Mobil Oil Co. , 153 NLRB 1244 (1965)	21
Triangle Tool & Engineering, Inc. , 226 NLRB 1354 (1976)	21

TABLE OF AUTHORITIES
(continued)

Walls Mfg. Co. , 137 NLRB 1317 (1962)	21
Wray Electric Contracting, Inc. , 210 NLRB 757 (1974)	21

State Court Cases

Discover Bank v. Superior Court , 113 P.3d 1100 (Cal. 2005)	30, 31
--------------------------------------------------------------------------	--------

Federal Statutes

15 U.S.C. § 1	33
28 U.S.C. § 2072(b)	17
29 U.S.C. § 103	23
29 U.S.C. § 103 (a) and (b)	23
29 U.S.C. § 104	24
29 U.S.C. § 151	31
29 U.S.C. § 157	32, 36
29 U.S.C. § 159(a)	36
29 U.S.C. § 160(b)	18
29 U.S.C. § 216(b)	17, 33
29 U.S.C. § 626(b)	17
29 U.S.C. §§ 102–104	23
29 U.S.C. §§ 104(h) and 104(d)	24
29 U.S.C. §§ 152(3) and (11)	42
9 U.S.C. § 2	29

Federal Rules

Fed. R. Civ. P. 24(b)	39
-----------------------------	----

TABLE OF AUTHORITIES

(continued)

Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 23 33

Rule 24 of the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure 39

Federal Regulations

29 C.F.R. § 102.15 19

29 C.F.R. § 102.33(c)..... 19

Other Authorities

NLRB Casehandling Manual, Part 1 § 10266.5 19

Miscellaneous

Black's Law Dictionary (8th ed. 1999) 38

II. INTRODUCTION

There are two issues before the Administrative Law Judge (“ALJ”) in this case: (1) whether Respondents unlawfully maintained an overly broad no solicitation policy, and (2) whether Respondents unlawfully maintained and enforced arbitration agreements containing a class action waiver.

Regarding the no solicitation policies, Respondents assert that their current no solicitation policies are lawful, and Respondents effectively repudiated any overly broad provision in compliance with Passavant Memorial Area Hospital, 237 NLRB 138 (1978) (Section III).

In regard to Respondents’ arbitration agreements, Respondents raise the unique argument (which the ALJ should consider before addressing the Board’s jurisprudence under D.R. Horton and Murphy Oil U.S.A., Inc.) that pursuant to the Supreme Court’s decision in Rent-A-Center, West, Inc., v. Jackson the ALJ (and the Board) cannot consider any question regarding the enforceability of the arbitration agreement because the arbitration agreement lawfully delegates any question regarding enforceability to a court, and not to the Board. See (Section IV. A).

Respondents’ arbitration agreements are also lawful under the NLRA, and even assuming that the NLRA prohibits class action waivers, the Federal Arbitration Act nevertheless requires that the arbitration agreements must be enforced as written. (Section IV. B and C). Moreover, a federal court has already entered an order enforcing the arbitration agreements, and because neither Charging Party nor Counsel for the General Counsel ever argued to that court that the arbitrations were unlawful under the Act, any re-consideration of the district court’s decision should be barred by various equitable doctrines. (Section IV. F).

Finally, the remedies requested by Counsel for the General Counsel are inappropriate in this case, and respectfully requests that the ALJ limit any order accordingly.

III. STATEMENT OF FACTS

A. Procedural History.

Charging Party Luis Rodriguez (“Charging Party”) filed Charge No. 12-CA-157478 with the Board, alleging that TBC Corporation (“Respondent Corporation”) violated Section 8(a)(1) of the National Labor Relations Act (“NLRA” or the “Act”) by seeking to enforce arbitration agreements with a class action waiver, and Charging Party’s actual employer TBC Retail Group (“Respondent Retail Group”) submitted a Statement of Position in response thereto on September 4, 2015. On November 19, 2015, Charging Party submitted a Corrected Amended Charge to Charge No. 12-CA-157478 which was substantively identical to its initial Charge except that it named Respondent Retail Group as the employer against whom the charge was brought. (GCX-1(d)). On November 30, 2015, the Regional Director issued a Complaint on Charge No. 12-CA-157478 against Respondent Retail Group for maintaining and enforcing arbitration agreements containing class action waivers. (GCX-1(g)).

On February 25, 2016, Charging Party filed a Second Amended Charge to Charge No. 12-CA-157478 which was, again, substantively identical to its earlier charge except that it named both Respondent Corporation and Respondent Retail Group as the Charged Parties. (GCX-1(q)). That same day, Charging Party filed Charge No. 12-CA-170543 against Respondent Corporation and Respondent Retail Group (collectively “Respondents”) asserting, for the first time, that since November 1, 2010, they maintained an overly broad no solicitation rule. (GCX-1(n)). Respondents submitted their position statement in response to Charge No. 12-CA-170543 on April 6, 2016.

On May 17, 2016, the Regional Director issued a Consolidated Complaint alleging that TBC Corporation (“Respondent Corporation”) and TBC Retail Group (“Respondent Retail Group”) (collectively “Respondents”) violated Section 8(a)(1) of the Act by (1) requiring employees to sign an arbitration agreement containing a class action waiver, (2) by enforcing said agreement by filing a Motion to Compel Arbitration in a federal court lawsuit, and (3) maintaining an overly broad no-solicitation rule in Respondent Corporation's Associate Handbook (hereafter, the "Consolidated Complaint"). (GCX-1(t)). On September 1, 2016, Counsel for the General Counsel ("CGC") filed a Joint Motion and Stipulated Record ("JX-1") that was agreed to by the parties, including attached exhibits, and the Administrative Law Judge ("ALJ") has provided the parties until October 7, 2016 to submit trial briefs.

B. Facts Relevant to Respondents' No-Solicitation Policy

Since January 18, 2012, Respondents have maintained Human Resources Policies and Procedures, Policy No. 406 regarding Solicitation and Distribution ("HR Solicitation Policy"). (JX-1 at ¶ 31; JX-17). The HR Solicitation Policy complies fully with the NLRA as construed by the Board, providing, in pertinent part, as follows:

TBC Corporation limits Associates from engaging in solicitation or distribution during work time or in work areas, that may interfere with TBC Corporation's operations.

For the purpose of this policy, the following definitions apply:

1. Definitions:

a. Working Time - working time is that period during the workday when the associate is supposed to be on the job or otherwise attending to the duties of his or her job. It does not include such time as breaks, lunch, or rest periods, or before and after work.

b. Work Areas – work areas are those parts of the facility where associates are involved in productive activity. Work areas do not include break areas, parking lots, or facility entrances.

2. Solicitation and Distribution:

a. Engaging in solicitation for subscriptions, memberships, money to purchase gifts or flowers, or other outside activities is not permitted during an associate's working time or with another associate during that associate's working time.

b. Distribution of pamphlets or other printed materials of any kind is not permitted in the work areas of the facility at any time.

c. Distribution of pamphlets or other printed materials of any kind is not permitted by an associate during his or her working time or to another associate during that associate's working time.

d. Solicitation or distribution on facility premises by non-associates is not permitted at any time.

(JX-17) (emphasis added).

Respondents also make available to their employees an Associate Handbook, the latest version of which was revised April 4, 2016 ("2016 Associate Handbook"). The 2016 Associate Handbook contains a provision regarding no solicitation which also complies with the NLRA, providing as follows:

TBC prohibits solicitation during working time to prevent workplace distractions or misunderstandings that can result from solicitation. This means that we do not allow Associates to engage in solicitation for subscriptions, memberships, money to purchase gifts or flowers, or other outside activities during the working time of an Associate or with another employee during that Associate's working time. Working time is that period during the workday when the associate is supposed to be on the job or otherwise attending to the duties of his or her job. It does not include such time as breaks, lunch, or rest periods, or before and after work. Non-employees are prohibited from any solicitation in our buildings or elsewhere on our property.

(JX-1 at ¶ 32; JX-17).

Previously, Respondent's Associate Handbook ("2010 Associate Handbook"), contained a no solicitation provision, which provided that:

TBC provides a solicitation free work environment in order to prevent workplace distractions or misunderstandings that can result from solicitation. This means that we do not allow Associates or non-employees to solicit in our buildings, on our property or during work hours, unless that solicitation is approved in advance by the respective Senior Executive in conjunction with Human Resources.

(JX-1 at ¶ 30; JX-16).¹

The no solicitation provision in the 2010 Associate Handbook was repudiated by Respondent when it published the 2016 Associate Handbook revised April 4, 2016. (JX-1 at ¶ 32; JX-17). Since April 8, 2016, the 2016 Associate Handbook has been available to all employees through Respondents' intranet and has been provided to all new hires. (JX-1 at ¶ 32 and 34). On April 5 and 6, 2016, Respondents posted a notice to employees regarding solicitation on the associate information bulletin boards located in each of Respondents' locations stating that they would not promulgate or maintain written work rules prohibiting employees from soliciting in Respondents' buildings, on [their] property, or during work hours. (JX-1 at ¶ 33; JX-19). Since April 6, 2016, Respondents' human resources managers have either visually or verbally confirmed with each store manager that the notices distributed by Respondents were posted to the associate information bulletin boards located in each store. (JX-1 at ¶ 35).

C. Facts Relevant to Respondents' Arbitration Agreement.

Since March 2014, Respondents have required all employees to sign an arbitration agreement ("Arbitration Agreement" or "Agreement"). (JX-1 at ¶ 12; JX-2 at ¶ 14; JX-3). In the Agreement, Respondents and their employees agreed to submit all employment-related disputes to arbitration. (JX-1 at 12-13; JX-2 at 1, subsection 1). The Agreement also prohibits claims brought on a class or collective basis. (JX-2 at 1, subsection 2) (emphasis added).

¹ Nevertheless, the 2010 Associate Handbook stated numerous times that it was intended only to express examples and excerpts of Respondent's Policies and Guidelines (including the HR Solicitation Policy) and that it was every Associate's responsibility to be familiar with all Respondent's official policies and procedures, a full list of which were available through the Company's intranet and Human Resources office. (JX-16).

There are several facts that are critically important to this proceeding, and which require a finding in favor of Respondents.

- First, the Agreement provides that any “issue concerning the enforceability or validity of this waiver must be decided by a court,” (JX-2 at 1, subsection 2) (emphasis added);
- Second, its provisions apply only “[t]o the maximum extent permitted by law,” (JX-2 at 1, subsection 2);
- Third, the Agreement carves out proceedings before the National Labor Relations Board (and all other government agencies), (JX-2 at 1); and
- Fourth, the Agreement carves out “[c]laims that are expressly precluded from arbitration by a governing federal statute or regulation or by a state law that is not preempted by the Federal Arbitration Act.” (JX-2 at 1).

The first of these bars this proceeding. The second, third and fourth preclude any finding that the Arbitration Agreement imposes any unlawful restraint.

In addition, the parties agreed to a severability clause that provides, “if any court of competent jurisdiction finds any part or provision of this Agreement void, voidable, or otherwise unenforceable, such a finding will not affect the validity of the remainder of the Agreement and all other parts and provisions will remain in full force and effect.” (JX-2 at 3) (emphasis added). This clause requires that, regardless of whether the class action waiver is enforceable, the parties are still bound to arbitration.

On June 19, 2015, four months after Charging Party resigned his employment, Corey Desimoni and James Reiter (collectively “Plaintiffs”), filed a lawsuit against Respondent Corporation in the United States District Court for the Middle District of Florida (“District Court,” and the “Lawsuit”). (JX-2 at ¶ 10, 20). In their Complaint, the Plaintiffs, allege overtime violations pursuant to the Fair Labor Standards Act (“FLSA”). (JX-2 at ¶ 20; JX-7). In June 2015, Charging Party opted into the lawsuit, and in July 2015, Plaintiffs filed a Motion for Conditional Certification of a collective action under § 216(b) of the FLSA. (JX-2 at ¶ 21–22; JX-8; JX-9).

On August 20, 2015, Defendant filed a Motion to Compel Arbitration (“Motion to Compel Arbitration”) with the District Court, but in its Motion to Compel Arbitration, Respondent Corporation argued only that the District Court should compel the Charging Party and others who signed Arbitration Agreements to arbitrate their claims. (JX-10). Respondent Corporation did not assert in that motion that the District Court should compel arbitration specifically on an individual, rather than a collective, or class basis. (JX-10 at 8).

Plaintiffs filed their Response in Opposition to the Motion to Compel (“Opposition to Motion to Compel”) on September 8, 2015, but in opposing the Motion to Compel, neither the Charging Party nor the named Plaintiffs challenged the clause that designated to the court the authority to determine enforceability of the Arbitration Agreement. (JX-2 at ¶¶ 23, 25; JX-10; JX-12). Further, although Plaintiffs and Charging Party are represented by the same counsel, neither argued in opposition to Motion to Compel Arbitration that the Agreement was unenforceable under the NLRA, or that D.R. Horton, 357 NLRB No. 184 (2012) or Murphy Oil U.S.A., Inc., 361 NLRB No. 72 (2014) was implicated by the Motion to Compel. (Compare GCX-1(a), GCX-1(d), GCX-1(n), GCX-1(q), JX-4, and JX-5 with JX-7, JX-9, and JX-12). Rather, Plaintiffs mainly contested whether the Arbitration Agreement was actually signed by named Plaintiff Corey Desimoni and opt-in Plaintiff Charging Party. (JX-12 at 8–9). On July 1, 2016, the District Court held that the Arbitration Agreement was enforceable, and granted the Motion to Compel Arbitration. (JX-15).

IV. LEGAL ANALYSIS—RESPONDENT’S NO-SOLICITATION PROVISIONS

A. Respondents’ Current No-Solicitation Policy and Associate Handbook Provision Are Lawful under the NLRA.

Both the HR Solicitation Policy (in effect since January 2012) and the 2016 Associate Handbook no solicitation provision are lawful under Board law. In both, solicitation is prohibited only during employees’ working time and in non-work areas, and each policy clearly explains that working time does not include breaks, lunch, rest periods, or before and after work. See Our Way, Inc., 268 NLRB 394 (1983) (reiterating standard that “rules prohibiting solicitation during working time are presumptively lawful because such rules imply that solicitation is permitted during nonworking time.”). Therefore, Respondents’ current HR Solicitation Policy and the 2016 Associate Handbook no solicitation provision are lawful under Section 8(a)(1) of the Act.

B. Respondents Effectively Repudiated any Allegedly Unlawful No Solicitation Provision.

Moreover, Respondents have repudiated the allegedly unlawful no solicitation provision in the 2010 Associate Handbook. As the Board explained in Passavant Memorial Area Hospital, an employer can repudiate unlawful conduct under the Act if the repudiation meets the following criteria: (1) timely; (2) unambiguous; (3) specific in nature to the coercive conduct; (4) free from other proscribed illegal conduct; (5) adequately published to the employees involved; (6) there must be no proscribed conduct on the employer’s part after publication; (7) the repudiation must give assurances to employees that in the future the employer will not interfere with the exercise of their Section 7 rights; and (8) repudiation must occur in advance of the filing of a Complaint. 237 NLRB 138 (1978).

Here, Respondent revised the no solicitation provision in the 2010 Associate Handbook when it issued the 2016 Associate Handbook on April 4, 2016. (JX-1 at ¶ 32). The repudiation was both timely and occurred before the Consolidated Complaint² was issued on May 17, 2016. (GCX-1(t)). To effectuate the repudiation, Respondents notified all of their employees that the no solicitation provision in the 2010 Associate Handbook had been revised by posting notices on the associate information bulletin boards located in every store. (JX-1 at ¶ 33). In addition, beginning on or about April 4, 2016, Respondents provided the 2016 Associate Handbook to and/or made it available to all of their employees. (JX-1 at ¶ 32). Neither the Consolidated Complaint nor the Joint Motion and Stipulated Record allege or assert any facts indicating that there was any proscribed conduct on the employer's part after publication of the repudiation or that any other proscribed illegal conduct relating to the no solicitation provision ever occurred. Finally, the notices posted on the associate information bulletin boards located in every store, gave assurances to all employees that in the future Respondents would not interfere with the exercise of their Section 7 rights, stating:

FEDERAL LAW GIVES YOU THE RIGHT TO:

- Form, join, or assist a union;
- Choose representatives to bargain with us on your behalf;
- Act together with other employees for your benefit and protection; and
- Choose not to engage in any of these protected activities.

WE WILL NOT do anything that interferes with these rights.
Specifically:

WE WILL NOT promulgate or maintain Written Work rules prohibiting you from:

- 1) Soliciting in our buildings, on our property, or during work hours. We will continue to have a work rule that prohibits you from soliciting during an employee's working time or with another employee during that employee's working time.

² The initial Complaint, issued on November 30, 2015, did not contain any allegations regarding Respondents' no solicitation policy.

"Working time" does not include such time as breaks, lunch, or rest periods, or before and after work.

2) Engaging in any conduct that will negatively impact the Company. We will continue to have a work rule that prohibits you from engaging in activities, investments, or associations that compete with the Company or that exploit your position with the Company for personal gain.

3) Failing to participate in any company investigation. We will continue to have a work rule that requires you to cooperate in any company investigation of workplace misconduct.

WE HAVE rescinded and given no effect to the rules described above. WE HAVE posted the revised Written Work Rules in the Associate Handbook. Also, Human Resources Policy 406 contains a more detailed description of the Company's no-solicitation and no-distribution policy, and remains in effect.

(JX-1 at ¶ 33; JX-19) (emphasis added).

The facts in this case are nearly identical to Atlas Logistics Retail Group Retail Services, 357 NLRB No. 37 (2011), where the employer repudiated its overly-broad work rules using a posted notice nearly identical to what was posted by Respondents,³ after both a charge and

³ In Atlas Logistics, the posting notice provided as follows:

FEDERAL LAW GIVES YOU THE RIGHT TO:

- Form, join, or assist a union;
- Choose representatives to bargain with us on your behalf;
- Act together with other employees for your benefit and protection; and
- Choose not to engage in any of these protected activities.

WE WILL NOT do anything that interferes with these rights. More particularly:
WE WILL NOT promulgate or maintain Written Work rules prohibiting you from:

- (1) Discussing wages, hours, and working conditions. We will continue to have a work rule that prohibits you from possessing classified Company information without authorization or revealing confidential information about the Company, that does not relate to wages, hours and working conditions, to unauthorized persons, or removal of such information from the workplace.
- (2) Enforcing or remaining on plant premises when not scheduled to work or when not on Company related business. We will continue to have a work rule that prohibits you from entering or remaining in the interior of the warehouse or other work areas when not scheduled for work; or complaint had been brought. In Atlas Logistics, both the ALJ and the Board found that the employer effectively repudiated its unlawful work rules. Id. at n. 1. In doing so, they rejected the General Counsel’s argument that the repudiation was not timely because it was made approximately a month after the charge was filed (and, because the complaint was issued only a day after the charge, also after the complaint was brought), stating that “[t]aking into account the task of revising the rules, publishing the revised rules, and posting the notice, [respondent’s] remedial action was reasonably prompt.” Id. at 5. Moreover, just as with Respondents’ no solicitation provision, although the unlawful work rules were maintained for a long time, there was no evidence presented that the rules were ever enforced and the first challenge to their legality was raised by the charge. Id. The ALJ also held that the repudiation occurred in a context free of unremedied unfair labor practices because the other unfair labor practices found by the ALJ were entirely unrelated to the work rules at issue and were “not of a nature that would tend to undermine the assurances that [respondent] gave to employees concerning the work rules.” Id.
- (3) Conducting personal business during breaks or meal times. We will continue to have a work rule that prohibits you from conducting personal business during working time of any employee. "Working time" does not include breaks or meal times.

In this case, any challenge to the legality of the no solicitation provision in the 2010 Associate Handbook was first brought to Respondents’ attention in Charge No. 170543, which was filed on February 25, 2016. It is undisputed that Respondents repudiated the allegedly unlawful no solicitation provision approximately a month later, by April 6, 2016. Moreover, the Consolidated Complaint was not brought until over a month after Respondents’ repudiation, on May 17, 2016. Therefore, Respondents effectively repudiated any unlawful no solicitation policy in the 2010 Associate Handbook, and that allegation in the Complaint should be dismissed.

WE WILL rescind and give no effect to the rules described above, and WE WILL post the revised Written Work Rules that do not contain the unlawful rules, and provide the language of the lawful rules.

V. LEGAL ANALYSIS—RESPONDENTS’ ARBITRATION AGREEMENT

A. Supreme Court Precedent Prohibits the ALJ and the Board from Considering the Enforceability of Respondents’ Arbitration Agreement Because it Contains a Lawful Delegation Clause.

The ALJ and the Board are bound by the Supreme Court’s decisions,⁴ including Rent-A-Center, West, Inc. v. Jackson, 561 U.S. 63 (2010). In Rent-A-Center, the Supreme Court held that under the Federal Arbitration Act (“FAA”), where the parties specify in an arbitration agreement who has authority to determine the enforceability of the agreement, the parties’ choice must be enforced, unless a party specifically challenges the delegation provision. 561 U.S. at 65. Respondents’ Arbitration Agreement expressly states, “Any issue concerning the enforceability or validity of this waiver must be decided by a court . . .” (JX-2 at 1, subsection 2). Thus, any question regarding the enforceability or validity of the Arbitration Agreement, including the class and collective action waiver contained therein, has been expressly delegated for determination by a “court,” which does not include the NLRB or any other administrative agency.⁵ Accordingly, any question regarding enforceability of the Arbitration Agreement in this case must be decided by a court,⁶ not by the Board or an NLRB ALJ.

This issue is dispositive, and, if adopted, there is no need to read further. The remainder of this brief provides additional and alternative reasons for ruling in Respondents’ favor.

⁴ See Iowa Beef Packers, Inc., 144 NLRB 615, 616 (1963) (“It has been the Board’s consistent policy” to defer to decisions of the Supreme Court of the United States).

⁵ The reference here to a “court” does not include the administrative procedures utilized by the Board because the Arbitration Agreement distinguishes a “court” from “Proceedings Before the National Labor Relations Board,” which is referred to expressly in the section of the Arbitration Agreement that pertains to claims not covered by the Arbitration Agreement. (JX-2 at 1).

⁶ In this case, the United States District Court for the Middle District of Florida has both considered and upheld the validity of the Arbitration Agreement. (JX-1 at ¶¶ 20, 27–28; JX-14; JX-15).

B. Respondents' Arbitration Agreement Is Lawful Under the NLRA.

1. Burden of Proof.

The burden of proof is upon CGC to prove, by a preponderance of the evidence that an unfair labor practice has occurred. Routre Bertrand Dupoint, Inc., 271 NLRB , 443 450 (1984). In this case, CGC asserts that Respondents engaged in an unfair labor practice by requiring employees to sign, and then subsequently enforcing, an arbitration agreement containing a class action waiver. When considering whether to enforce an arbitration agreement, “[t]he burden is on the party opposing arbitration, here, plaintiffs, to show that Congress intended to preclude a collective action waiver in an arbitration agreement.” Walthour v. Chipio Windshield Repair, LLC, 745 F.3d 1326, 1331 (11th Cir.), cert. denied, 134 S. Ct. 2886 (2014) (citing Gilmer v. Interstate/Johnson Lane Corp., 500 U.S. 20, 26 (1991) (the burden is on the party opposing arbitration to show that ‘Congress intended to preclude a waiver of a judicial forum for [statutory] claims’)).

2. Respondents' Arbitration Agreement is Lawful because it Expressly Permits the Filing of Administrative Charges.

Applying Lutheran Heritage Village – Livonia, 343 NLRB 646 (2004), the Board has explained, that like other work rules, arbitration agreements may be found unlawful under the Act if they explicitly restrict activities protected by Section 7, or, alternatively, upon a showing that (1) an employee would reasonably construe the rule as prohibiting Section 7 activity; (2) the rule was promulgated in response to union activity; or (3) the rule has been applied to restrict the exercise of Section 7 rights. D.R. Horton, 357 NLRB 2277, 2280 (2012).

The Consolidated Complaint does not specifically allege that Respondents' Arbitration Agreement violated Section 8(a)(1) because its language would lead employees to believe that they were prohibited from filing unfair labor practices charges, or that it was promulgated in response to union activity. Nor does any such claim exist because the Arbitration Agreement clearly states that “[p]roceedings before the National Labor Relations Board . . .” are claims not covered by this [Arbitration] Agreement. (JX-2 at 1). Based on that language, no employee would reasonably believe that they were prohibited from filing unfair labor practice charges with the Board, and, therefore, the Arbitration Agreement is lawful under Section 8(a)(1) of the Act.

3. Arbitration Agreements with Class Action Waivers Are Lawful.

a. The Current Status of the Law Regarding Class Action Waivers.

“[T]he NLRA was enacted and reenacted prior to the advent in 1966 of modern class action practice.” D.R. Horton, 737 F.3d 344, 362 (5th Cir. 2013). In this context, it is significant that, in the NLRA, Congress said nothing about class action lawsuits or collective action lawsuits. Moreover, despite the NLRA’s enactment in 1935 (and its reenactment in 1947), for more than seventy-five years, the Board has never suggested (prior to its decision in D.R. Horton) that the Act created a substantive right to engage in collective actions. D.R. Horton, Inc. v. NLRB, 737 F.3d 344, 356 (5th Cir. 2013) (“no court decision prior to the Board’s ruling under review today had held that the Section 7 right to engage in ‘concerted activities for the purpose of . . . other mutual aid or protection’ prohibited class action waivers in arbitration agreements”).

However, in Murphy Oil, D.R. Horton, and other cases following thereafter, the Board has contended that an arbitration agreement is unlawful under Section 7 if it contains a class action waiver. The Board’s fundamental premise in these cases is that the opportunity to participate in “collective legal action” is a “core substantive right” protected by Section 7. See Murphy Oil U.S.A., Inc., 361 NLRB No. 72, at *1 (2014).

Three federal Circuit Courts of Appeals, and federal district courts too numerous to mention,⁷ have overruled Board decisions on this issue, and have held that class and collective action waivers, in arbitration agreements, are enforceable. See Patterson v. Raymours Furniture Co., Inc., No. 15-2820-CV, 2016 WL 4598542, at *2 (2d Cir. 2016) (“the controlling question in this case was clearly presented in Sutherland, and this Court rejected appellants’ position”); Cellular Sales of Missouri, LLC, v. NLRB, 824 F.3d 772 (8th Cir. 2016); Murphy Oil, 808 F.3d 1013 (5th Cir. 2015); D.R. Horton, Inc., 737 F.3d 344, 358–59 (5th Cir. 2013); Sutherland v. Ernst & Young LLP, 726 F.3d 290 (2d Cir. 2013); Owen v. Bristol Care, Inc., 702 F.3d 1050, 1053-55 (8th Cir. 2013). Moreover, two Circuit Courts of Appeal have agreed with the Board and held that class action waivers are unlawful under the Act. Morris v. Ernst & Young, LLP, No. 13-16599, 2016 WL 4433080 (9th Cir. 2016); Lewis v. Epic Systems, Corp, 823 F.3d 1147 (7th Cir. 2016).

Respondents have sought in this brief to articulate all of the arguments enumerated in the above-referenced decisions, including D.R. Horton and Murphy Oil that support their position that arbitration agreements containing class action waivers are lawful under the Act, and Respondents expressly incorporate those arguments by reference herein.

b. Employees Can Lawfully Waive Their Ability to Participate in Collective Litigation Because it is a Procedural, and Not a Substantive, Right.

It is well-established that arbitration agreements are lawful in the employment context. Circuit City Stores, Inc. v. Adams, 532 U.S. 105 (2001). Moreover, parties to a lawsuit can waive any procedural right, and the Board has not argued otherwise. See, e.g., In re Tax Serv. Ass’n of Illinois, 305 U.S. 160, 164 (1938) (“Since the parties had only a procedural right to have these issues tried in a plenary suit, they were at liberty to waive this right.”) (internal citations omitted); Davis v. United States, 417 U.S. 333, 349–50 (1974) (argument that procedural rights had not been waived was “frivolous”).

⁷ See Murphy Oil, 361 NLRB No. 72, at n. 5 (2014) (Miscimarra, dissenting).

Therefore, in its argument against class action waivers, CGC asserts that the right to engage in collective adjudication is (according to the Board) a substantive right under Section 7 of the Act (which cannot be waived), and, thus, any arbitration agreement waiving that right is unlawful, despite the FAA.

(1) Established Law, Including Supreme Court Decisions, Reflect that Any Right to Collective Adjudication is Procedural, Not Substantive.

Contrary to the Board’s position, there is a long history of Supreme Court decisions enforcing arbitration agreements as they were written and agreed to by the parties, including agreements with waivers of the right to engage in collective actions, or otherwise limiting employees’ procedural rights. The Supreme Court even upheld as lawful a collective bargaining agreement that entirely prohibited employees from filing a non-NLRA claim, specifically an age discrimination claim, in court. 14 Penn Plaza LLC v. Pyett, 556 U.S. 247 (2009).

A collective action is simply a litigation mechanism, and the Board’s characterization of the right to participate in collective actions as “substantive” is simply wrong. According to the Supreme Court, collective adjudication is a procedural right, and not a substantive right or remedy. Deposit Guar. Nat’l Bank v. Roper, 445 U.S. 326, 332 (1980) (“The right of a litigant to employ [a class action under] Rule 23 is a procedural right only, ancillary to the litigation of substantive claims.”); see also Welch v. United States, 136 S. Ct. 1257, 1264–65 (2016) (“A rule is substantive rather than procedural if it alters the range of conduct or the class of persons that the law [regulates] Procedural rules, by contrast, regulate only the manner of determining the [effect of the substantive law].”) (emphasis in original) (internal citations omitted); Amchem Prods., Inc. v. Windsor, 521 U.S. 591, 612–13 (1997) (construing Rule 23’s class action requirements in accordance with the Rules Enabling Act mandate that the rules of procedure “shall not abridge, enlarge or modify any substantive right.”) (citing 28 U.S.C. § 2072(b)).

Further, the Supreme Court and numerous Circuit Courts of Appeals have rejected the argument that federal statutes such as the FLSA and the Age Discrimination in Employment Act [“ADEA”], which expressly provide plaintiffs with the right to pursue collective litigation, somehow changed the ability to engage in class adjudication into a substantive right that could not be waived under the FAA. Interpreting its own precedent, the Supreme Court recently acknowledged that “in [Gilmer v. Interstate/Johnson Lane], we had no qualms in enforcing a class waiver in an arbitration agreement even though the federal statute at issue, the [ADEA], expressly permitted collective actions. We said that statutory permission did ‘not mean that individual attempts at conciliation were intended to be barred.’” Italian Colors, 133 S. Ct. 2304, 2311 (2013) (citing Gilmer, 500 U.S. 20 (1991)). Moreover, numerous Circuit Courts have unanimously rejected the argument that the FLSA’s collective action mechanism⁸ created any substantive right to collective litigation, thereby, upholding the enforceability of arbitration agreements with class action waivers. Walthour v. Chipio Windshield Repair, LLC, 745 F.3d 1326, 1336–37 (11th Cir.), cert. denied, 134 S. Ct. 2886 (2014); Sutherland v. Ernst & Young LLP, 726 F.3d 290, 296–97 & n.6 (2d Cir. 2013) (determining that the FLSA collective action right is a waivable procedural mechanism); Owen v. Bristol Care, Inc., 702 F.3d 1050, 1052–53 (8th Cir. 2013) (determining that the FLSA did not set forth a “contrary congressional command” showing “that a right to engage in class actions overrides the mandate of the FAA in favor of arbitration”); Carter v. Countrywide Credit Indus., Inc., 362 F.3d 294, 298 (5th Cir.

⁸ The statutory framework of 29 U.S.C. § 216(b), which authorizes opt-in collective actions in FLSA and ADEA cases, also makes it clear that the “right” to engage in collective actions may be waived. As aptly noted by the Eighth Circuit, “[e]ven assuming Congress intended to create some ‘right’ to class actions, if an employee must affirmatively opt in to any such class action, surely the employee has the power to waive participation in a class action as well.” Owen v. Bristol Care, Inc., 702 F.3d 1050, 1052–53 (8th Cir. 2013) (analyzing FLSA § 16(b)). These same provisions are incorporated in the ADEA pursuant to 29 U.S.C. § 626(b).

2004) (no substantive right to collective action under FLSA, despite express statutory term authorizing aggrieved individual to pursue claim on collective basis); Adkins v. Labor Ready, Inc., 303 F.3d 496, 506 (4th Cir. 2002) (determining that a plaintiff failed to point to any “suggestion in the text, legislative history, or purpose of the FLSA that Congress intended to confer a non-waivable right to a class action under that statute”); Kuehner v. Dickinson & Co., 84 F.3d 316, 319–20 (9th Cir. 1996) (same). Cf. Wal-Mart Stores, Inc. v. Dukes, 564 U.S. 388, 329 (2011) (collective adjudication is “an exception to the usual rule that litigation is conduct by and on behalf of the individual named parties only”).

Given the Supreme Court and Circuit Court of Appeals’ precedent that class and collective actions are merely procedural and that class action waivers in arbitration agreements are lawful even pursuant to federal statutes that expressly create a right to bring lawsuits collectively, it is clear that the right to participate in class actions and collective actions is a procedural right, which may be waived.

(2) The Board’s Own Internal Litigation Procedures Contradict its Interpretation That the Act Creates a Substantive Right for Employees to Pursue Collective Adjudication.

The Board’s own internal procedures (which the Board has not changed based on its recent reinterpretation of the NLRA) further undermine its interpretation that Section 7 creates a substantive right to engage in collective litigation. When an employer violates the NLRA, an employee has no right – procedural or substantive – to pursue a collective claim, or even to pursue an individual action. Murphy Oil, 361 NLRB No. 72, at*9 (“Under the NLRA’s statutory scheme, employees’ Section 7 rights are enforced solely by the Board – there is no private right of action under the Act – through the procedures established by Section 10.”). To the contrary, for nearly a century, individuals who have grievances under the NLRA have been required, first, to file a charge with the NLRB. 29 U.S.C. § 160(b); Nash v. Florida Industrial Comm’n, 389

U.S. 235, 235 (1967); NLRB Casehandling Manual, Part 1 § 10010. The Regional Director investigates the merits of those charges, and whether or not the Regional Director finds merit to charging party's contention, charging party has no right to pursue litigation on his or her own behalf, either on an individual or a collective basis. 29 C.F.R. § 102.15; Murphy Oil, 361 NLRB at *9.

If the Regional Director finds that a charge is meritorious, the General Counsel has authority to consolidate it with other charges and to pursue a collective remedy on behalf of numerous employees. 29 C.F.R. § 102.33(c); NLRB Casehandling Manual, Part 1 § 10266.5. But even with a finding by the Regional Director that a charge is meritorious, the employee still has no right or opportunity to pursue the claim on a collective basis. Instead, only the General Counsel has that authority. Charging Party has no right to pursue litigation under the NLRA, either on an individual or a collective basis. 29 C.F.R. § 102.15.

Thus, under the Board's own processes in Section 10 of the Act (and under the Board's own Rules and Regulations), an individual has never been given the substantive right to pursue litigation for alleged violations of the NLRA, either on his or her own behalf or on a collective basis. This puts the Board in the awkward and untenable position of arguing that the NLRA creates a substantive right to do, under other statutes, something it doesn't itself allow.

For more than three-quarters of a century, the Board itself has denied employees the right to pursue joint, class, collective and even individual claims under the NLRA. And neither the Board nor any court ever construed the NLRA as conferring a substantive right to bring collective lawsuits under other statutes – until 2012. The Board's position boils down to a contention that the NLRA converts what has universally been considered a procedural right, to a substantive right, even though no such right is expressed in the Act, no such right adheres to claims under the Act, and neither the Board nor any court ever construed the Act as creating such a right until 2012. If new rights are to be created after 75 years of jurisprudence has failed to find them in the statutory text, they should be identified by the legislature, not by an administrative agency.

(3) The Authority the Board Relies Upon Does Not Support its Argument that Collective Adjudication is a Substantive Right.

(a) The NLRB's Reliance on Caselaw, Specifically Eastex, Inc. v. NLRB, 437 U.S. 556 (1978) is Misplaced.

At the heart of the NLRB's argument is its contention that the Supreme Court's decision in Eastex Inc v. NLRB "ma[kes] clear that Section 7 protects employees when they seek to improve working conditions through resort to administrative and judicial forums." Murphy Oil, 361 NLRB No. 72, at *1. However, the Board's reliance on Eastex is erroneous because (1) Eastex itself did not hold that Section 7 provided employees with a right to resort to administrative or judicial forums; (2) interpreting the Board cases cited in Eastex, the Murphy Oil Board conflates the right to be free from retaliation for engaging in concerted activity with the right to engage in litigation; and (3) in Eastex the Supreme Court acknowledged that there should be limitations to when employees' concerted activities are protected under the "mutual aid or protection" clause of Section 7.

In Eastex, the Supreme Court construed the "mutual aid or protection" clause of Section 7 to consider whether an employer unlawfully prohibited the union from distributing a four-part newsletter that (1) urged employees to support the union and union solidarity, (2) encouraged employees to write their legislators to oppose a state "right-to-work" statute, and (3) criticized a Presidential veto of an increase in the federal minimum wage. Eastex, Inc. v. NLRB, 437 U.S. 556, 558–59 (1978). Although the Supreme Court noted that "it has been held that the 'mutual aid or protection' clause protects employees, from retaliation . . . when they seek to improve working conditions through resort to administrative and judicial forums,” the Eastex case itself had nothing to do with an employees’ resort to an administrative or judicial forum, and the clear text of the Supreme Court’s opinion states only that “it has been held,” not that the Supreme Court itself made that determination in Eastex. To the contrary, the Supreme Court acknowledged its holding was strictly limited to the distribution issue before it. Id. at 567–58 (“It is neither necessary nor appropriate, however, for us to attempt to delineate precisely the boundaries of the ‘mutual aid or protection’ clause. . . . To decide this case, it is enough to determine that the Board erred in holding that distribution . . . of the newsletter is for the purpose of ‘mutual aid or protection.’”).

Moreover, the Board conflates the cases cited and relied upon in Eastex, all of which protected employees from retaliation because they made a complaint to an administrative agency or provided assistance to the union in civil action,⁹ with a right to engage in litigation.

In the Eastex quote relied upon by the Board, however, the Supreme Court made clear that its only concern was about retaliation against employees who complained about working conditions in either administrative or judicial forums. Id. at 565–66 (emphasis added) (“To hold that activity of this nature [i.e. activities that could be characterized as “political”] is entirely unprotected-irrespective of location or the means employed-would leave employees open to retaliation¹⁰ for much legitimate activity that could improve their lot as employees. As this could ‘frustrate the policy of the Act to protect the right of workers to act together to better their working conditions,’ we do not think that Congress could have intended the protection of § 7 to be as narrow as petitioner insists.”). Thus, the cases cited in Eastex do not create any substantive Section 7 right to engage in litigation, whether it be on an individual or collective basis.¹¹

⁹ See Walls Mfg. Co., 137 NLRB 1317 (1962), enf’d, 321 F.2d 753 (finding that employer retaliated against employee when it discharged her after she wrote a letter to the state health department complaining of alleged unsanitary conditions in the employer’s restroom); Socony Mobil Oil Co., 153 NLRB 1244 (1965), enf’d, 357 F.2d 662 (2d Cir. 1966) (finding that employer violated Sections 8(a)(1) and (3) by suspending union representative because he filed an accusation with the United States Coast Guard that the employer was engaged in the unsafe operation of one of its vessels); Altex Ready Mixed Concrete Corp. v. NLRB, 542 F.2d 295, 297 (5th Cir. 1976) (stating that “[g]enerally, filing by employees of a labor-related civil action is protected activity under section 7 of the NLRA unless the employees acted in bad faith,” and finding that the employer violated the Act by discharging employees who signed false affidavits in support of the union’s labor-related civil action); Wray Electric Contracting, Inc., 210 NLRB 757 (1974) (finding that employer violated Sections 8(a)(1) and (3) of the Act by discharging employee after he filed an OSHA complaint with the Department of Labor); Alleluia Cushion Co., 221 NLRB 999 (1975) (finding that employee was engaged in protected, concerted activity when he filed complaint to state OSHA office and the employer’s home office); King Soopers, Inc., 222 NLRB 1011 (1976) (finding that employer unlawfully retaliated under the NLRA against employee who complained to state civil rights commission and EEOC where collective bargaining agreement provided that the employer and the union will fully comply with laws and regulations regarding discrimination); Triangle Tool & Engineering, Inc., 226 NLRB 1354 (1976) (finding that employer violated Section 8(a)(1) and (3) of the act after it discharged employee because he filed a complaint with the Wage and Hour Division of the Department of Labor).

Finally, the Supreme Court expressly acknowledged that there are limitations to conduct that should be included in Section 7’s “mutual aid or protection” clause. Id. at 567–58 (“It is true of course, that some concerted activity bears a less immediate relationship to employees’ interests as employees than other such activity. We may assume that at some point the relationship becomes so attenuated that an activity cannot fairly be deemed to come within the ‘mutual aid or protection’ clause.”) (emphasis added). The scenario at issue in this case — a particular litigation mechanism established and defined by statutes different than the Act, to handle claims under different statutes than the Act, in a different forum than the Board — falls precisely under this exception and has become “so attenuated” that it is not protected under Section 7 of the Act. See Murphy Oil, 361 NLRB No. 72 (Miscimarra, dissenting).¹²

¹⁰ Further, the Board’s cases in Eastex find that the Act prohibits retaliation regardless of whether a non-NLRA legal matter was handled individually, through joinder, or as a class. If the Board’s interpretation of Eastex is correct, it would mean that employees would also have a right to file all employment-related lawsuits regardless of whether the suit is filed as a class or collective action. The idea that the NLRA gives employees the right to file a lawsuit for all employment-related claims (which are presumably created by other statutes, such as Title VII, the ADEA, and the FLSA, but perhaps the Board intends to further expand that) is untenable.

¹¹ As Member Johnson explained in his dissenting opinion in Murphy Oil, “[a] principle aim of the Act is to protect employees against such retaliation, and its prohibition creates no risk of conflict with the FAA or any other Federal Law. . . . Protecting employees from job-related retaliation is the mission of this agency. Determining the terms under which litigation or arbitration is to be conducted is not.” Murphy Oil, 361 NLRB No. 72 (Johnson, dissenting).

¹² In his dissenting opinion, Member Miscimarra stated :

As the Supreme Court observed in Eastex v. NLRB, Section 7 was designed “to protect concerted activities for the somewhat broader purpose of ‘mutual aid or

(b) The NLRB's Reliance on the Norris-LaGuardia Act is Misplaced.

In support of its position, the Board also cites to the Norris-LaGuardia Act. Murphy Oil U.S.A., Inc., 361 NLRB at *1 (“And even before the Act was passed, Congress had declared in the Norris-LaGuardia Act that individual agreements restricting employees’ ‘concerted activities for the purpose of . . . mutual aid or protection’ – expressly included concerted legal activity – violated federal policy and were unenforceable.”) (citing 29 U.S.C. §§ 102–104). However, the Norris-LaGuardia Act says no such thing. 29 U.S.C. § 103, which pertains to the unenforceability of “yellow dog” contracts, expressly states that federal courts will not enforce contracts where “[e]ither party to such contract or agreement undertakes or promises not to join, become, or remain a member of any labor organization or of any employer organization;” or “[e]ither party to such contract or agreement undertakes or promises that he will withdraw from an employment relation in the event that he joins, becomes, or remains a member of any labor organization or of any employer organization.” 29 U.S.C. § 103 (a) and (b). This provision does not provide that contracts that limit employees’ right to engage in collective legal action are unenforceable.

The NLRB has simply interpreted the Norris-LaGuardia Act in a similar manner to its recent interpretation of the NLRA. However, the Board’s interpretation of the Norris LaGuardia Act is even less persuasive than its analysis of the NLRA because the Board is not entitled to any protection’ as well for the narrower purposes of ‘self organization’ and ‘collective bargaining.’” . . . In each of the cited examples of where resort to an agency or court regarding a non-NLRA claim or complaint was protected, the cases focused on protecting employees from retaliation for initiating or participating in the proceeding. None of the cases dealt—even remotely with the internal procedures applicable to the non NLRA claims or complaints associated with the employee activities. This is consistent with the Supreme Court’s statement . . . that ‘mutual aid or protection’ expanded Section 7 only ‘somewhat’ beyond the particular concerted activities enumerated in Section 7—i.e. self-organization, creating and supporting unions, and collective bargaining.

(emphasis added).

deference in its interpretation of the Norris-LaGuardia Act. D.R. Horton, Inc., 737 F.3d 344, 362 n. 10 (2013) (“It is undisputed that the [Norris-LaGuardia Act] is outside the Board’s interpretive ambit.”) (citing Lechmere, Inc. v. NLRB, 502 U.S. 527, 536 (1992)). Moreover, 29 U.S.C. § 104 provides that courts shall not, “in any case involving or growing out of a labor dispute,” enjoin any person from, “whether singly or in concert,” inter alia, “[a]greeing . . . not to” “aid[] any person participating [in] . . . any action or suit in any court of the United States or of any State.” 29 U.S.C. §§ 104(h) and 104(d). Thus, Section 104 of the Norris-LaGuardia Act expressly contemplates that employees may enter into agreements not to engage in collective litigation, and in fact prohibits courts from enjoining employees from entering into such agreements.

c. Section 8(a)(1) of the Act Only Prohibits Individual Employment Agreements That Restrain Employees’ Rights to Organize and Bargain Collectively and Does Not Prohibit Individual Agreements that May Extinguish Some Rights Under the Act.

Contrary to the Board’s assertions in Murphy Oil, 361 NLRB No. 72, at *11 (2014), National Licorice Co. v. NLRB, 309 U.S. 350 (1940) and J.I. Case Co. v. NLRB, 321 U.S. 332 (1944), do not support the Board’s finding that class action waivers are unlawful. Respondents adopt and incorporate Member Johnson’s thorough explanation of the majority’s misinterpretation of these cases as follows:

In National Licorice, the employer entered into contracts with its employees in which the employees agreed that they would not strike, demand a closed shop or signed agreement with any union, and that an employee’s discharge could not be submitted to arbitration or mediation. The agreements themselves had been procured in response to the employees’ designation of a union as their representative for collective bargaining and were part of an overall scheme to prevent unionization. In these circumstances, the Court held that the agreements unlawfully “imposed illegal restraints upon the employees’ rights to organize and bargain collectively guaranteed by [§§] 7 and 8 of the Act” and that the Board therefore could prohibit the employer from enforcing them.

None of the factors on which the Court relied in National Licorice are present here. The [Arbitration] Agreement w[as] not procured in response to employees' effort to unionize, and do[es] not even arguably restrain their right to organize and bargain collectively. I respectfully disagree with D.R. Horton's overbroad characterization of the Court's opinion in National Licorice as invalidating "agreements that employees will pursue claims against their employer only individually." Instead, the Court condemned such agreements only insofar as their purpose or effect was to foreclose any role for a union in the adjustment of the dispute. No evidence or contention of that character is present here.

J.I. Case is inapplicable for similar reasons. There, the Court held that an employer could not lawfully refuse to bargain collectively with a union that represented its employees on the basis of individual agreements previously reached with those employees. That holding would be applicable only if the Respondent relied upon the [Arbitration] Agreement as a basis for refusing to bargain over terms and conditions of employment (including a grievance arbitration procedure) with a duly certified or lawfully recognized union representing its employees. But again, no such facts are present here. Moreover, although D.R. Horton failed to acknowledge it, J.I. Case specifically approved individual agreements that do not have the proscribed effect on collective bargaining. In language that was inexplicably omitted from the D.R. Horton opinion, the Court stated that: "We know of nothing to prevent the employee's, because he is an employee, making any contract provided it is not inconsistent with a collective bargaining agreement or does not amount to or result from or is not part of an unfair labor practice." But in so doing the employer may not incidentally exact or obtain any diminution of his own obligation or any increase of those employees in the matters covered by the collective agreement.

Murphy Oil, 361 NLRB No. 72 (Johnson, dissenting). For all of the reasons stated above, Section 8(a)(1) of the NLRA does not prohibit agreements that waive the opportunity to participate in class or collective actions.

d. The Board Must Consider Employers' Substantial Business Justification for Prohibiting Class Arbitration.

In considering whether an employee would reasonably construe a rule as interfering with the exercise of Section 7 rights (and whether the rule was actually applied in that manner), the Board has adopted a two-part test, considering: (1) whether the employer’s conduct reasonably tended to interfere with Section 7 rights, and, if so, (2) whether the employer can establish a legitimate and substantial business justification for its conduct. Jeannette Corp. v. NLRB, (“In weighing the justifications offered by the employer we must heed the Supreme Court’s admonition that ‘(i)t is the primary responsibility of the Board and not of the courts “to strike the proper balance between the asserted business justifications and the invasion of employee rights in light of the Act and its policy.”’” 532 F.2d 916, 918–19 (3d Cir. 1976) (quoting NLRB v. Fleetwood Trailer Co., 389 U.S. 375, 378 (1967) and NLRB v. Great Dane Trailers, 388 U.S. 26 33–34 (1967)); see also Murphy Oil, 361 NLRB No. 72 (Johnson, dissenting). Therefore, the Board should consider, in its analysis, the numerous substantial business justifications articulated by Member Johnson in his dissenting opinion, including that “individual arbitration agreements may reduce litigation costs and delays by providing informal, streamlined procedures that can be tailored to the type of dispute they cover,” and that “while providing an effective method for resolving covered disputes, agreements that provide for individual arbitration also shield defendants from ‘the risk of “in terrorem” settlements that class actions entail.’” 361 NLRB No. 72 (Johnson, dissenting). Moreover, the Supreme Court has previously recognized numerous reasons for employers to include class action waivers in their arbitration agreements. In AT&T Mobility LLC v. Concepcion (which was issued prior to the Board’s decisions in either D.R. Horton or Murphy Oil), the Supreme Court explained as follows:

[T]he “changes brought about by the shift from bilateral arbitration to class-action arbitration” are “fundamental.” [Stolt-Nielsen] 559 U.S. at —, 130 S. Ct. at 1776. This is obvious as a structural matter: Classwide arbitration includes absent parties, necessitating additional and different procedures and involving higher stakes. Confidentiality becomes more difficult. And while it is theoretically possible to select an arbitrator with some expertise relevant to the class-certification question, arbitrators are not generally knowledgeable in the often-dominant procedural aspects of certification, such as the protection of absent parties.

563 U.S. 333, 347–48 (2011) (emphasis added). Similarly, the Supreme Court articulated that “[The switch from bilateral to class arbitration sacrifices the principal advantage of arbitration—its informality—and makes the process slower, more costly, and more likely to generate procedural morass than final judgment.” Id. at 348. In support of this rationale, the Supreme Court cited statistics provided by the American Arbitration Association (AAA) in its amicus curiae brief that as of September 2009, the AAA opened 238 class actions, 121 remained active, 162 had been settled, withdrawn, or dismissed, and not a single case had resulted in a final award on the merits; for the inactive cases, the median time from filing until settlement, withdrawal, or dismissal was 538 days and the mean was 630 days (which was nearly two years). Id. at 348–49. The Supreme Court also explained that:

[C]lass arbitration greatly increases risks to defendants. Informal procedures do of course have a cost: The absence of multilayered review makes it more likely that errors will go uncorrected. Defendants are willing to accept the costs of these errors in arbitration, since their impact is limited to the size of individual disputes, and presumably outweighed by savings from avoiding the courts. But when damages allegedly owed to tens of thousands of potential claimants are aggregated and decided at once, the risk of an error will often become unacceptable.

Id. at 350 (emphasis added). In addition, the Court explained that “[a]rbitration is poorly suited to the higher stakes of class litigation. In litigation, a defendant may appeal a certification decision on an interlocutory basis and, if unsuccessful, may appeal from a final judgment as well.” Id. at 350–51. Thus, there are numerous substantial business justifications for class action waivers in arbitration agreements. Balancing those justifications, the ALJ should find that class action waivers in arbitration agreements are lawful under the Act.

C. Even Assuming the NLRA Prohibits Class Action Waivers, the Federal Arbitration Act Requires that the Arbitration Agreement Be Enforced According to its Terms.

Even assuming that the NLRA bars waivers of class actions, the FAA requires that an arbitration agreement be enforced according to its terms unless it falls within one of the limited exceptions discussed below. The FAA is “[t]he background law governing” questions relating to the enforcement of an arbitration provision, even when other federal statutes are at issue, and it “establishes ‘a liberal federal policy favoring arbitration agreements.’” CompuCredit Corp. v. Greenwood, 132 S. Ct. 665, 668–69 (2012) (quoting Moses H. Cone Mem’l Hosp. v. Mercury Constr. Corp., 460 U.S. 1, 24 (1983)). Under the FAA, “courts must rigorously enforce arbitration agreements according to their terms. According to the Supreme Court, this rule applies to terms that specify with whom the parties choose to arbitrate their disputes, and the rules under which that arbitration will be conducted,” and therefore to provisions in arbitration agreements that waive the right to participate in class actions. American Express Co. v. Italian Colors Rest., 133 S. Ct. 2304, 09 (2013) (internal citations omitted). Moreover, the FAA allows parties to bind themselves to arbitration as they wish, and unequivocally obligates both courts and agencies to respect these contracts on their own terms. Id. Like the Arbitration Agreement that the CGC seeks to invalidate in this case, the arbitration agreement at issue in Italian Colors excluded class actions in litigation and arbitration, and the Supreme Court expressly found that agreement was lawful. Id. at 2308; see also Concepcion, 563 U.S. at 350.

In Italian Colors, the Supreme Court recognized only three exceptions to the FAA’s policy of enforcing arbitration contracts as written. First, the Court noted that an arbitration agreement may be invalid when it “prospective[ly] waive[s] . . . a party’s right to pursue statutory remedies.” 133 S. Ct. at 2310.¹³ Second, the Court cited the FAA’s so-called “savings clause” which says that all arbitration agreements “shall be valid, irrevocable, and enforceable, save upon such grounds as exist at law or in equity for the revocation of any contract.” Id. at 2309 (quoting 9 U.S.C. § 2). Third, the Court acknowledged that the FAA’s guarantees can be overridden by a “contrary congressional command,” such as when another law “evinces an intention to preclude” the particular kind of arbitration agreement. Id. Subject to these three exceptions, arbitration agreements “shall be valid . . . and enforceable.” 9 U.S.C. § 2. In D.R. Horton, Murphy Oil, and their progeny, the Board has claimed (or may have claimed) the protection of two exceptions to the FFA’s mandate, specifically that (1) the NLRA is a basis for the revocation of any contract that comes within the FAA’s savings clause, and (2) the NLRA amounts to a “contrary congressional command” overriding the FAA. See D.R. Horton, Inc. v. NLRB, 737 F.3d 344, 358 (5th Cir. 2013) (“The Board clearly relied on the FAA’s saving clause. Less clear is whether the Board also asserted that a contrary congressional command is present.”). As explained below, the Board cannot establish either of these exceptions.

1. The Board’s D.R. Horton Rule Does Not Fall Within the FAA’s Savings Clause.

The FAA’s savings clause allows courts to refuse to enforce arbitration contracts on those “grounds as exist at law or in equity for the revocation of any contract.” 9 U.S.C. § 2. Thus, the FAA savings clause “permits agreements to be invalidated by generally applicable contract defenses, such as fraud, duress, or unconscionability.” Concepcion, 563 U.S. at 339 (internal citations omitted). However, the savings clause does not permit invalidation of arbitration agreements based on defenses that “apply only to arbitration or that derive their meaning from the fact that an agreement to arbitrate is at issue,” or those that have a disproportionate impact on arbitration agreements. Id.

¹³ The Agreement at issue here expressly permits employees to pursue statutory remedies by filing charges with the Board – the only method the NLRA affords for pursuing its remedies. See Section IV. B. 2., supra.

The Board claims that all contracts that limit rights allegedly guaranteed by the NLRA are void because they contravene public policy, and so a contract that limits an employee’s supposed Section 7 right to be free of class-based arbitration waivers is void on a generally applicable public policy defense. Id. As an initial matter, the Board’s argument here relies entirely on the success of its first argument that the NLRA creates a substantive right to class-based arbitration. The Board can only be successful on this argument if it can demonstrate that there is a substantive right to engage in collective litigation which, as explained above, it cannot.

Moreover, the Board’s argument suffers a second flaw, which is that in Concepcion, the Supreme Court rejected a similar argument regarding the FAA’s savings clause. In Concepcion, plaintiffs who sought to avoid an arbitration agreement argued that under the California Supreme Court’s holding in Discover Bank v. Superior Court, 113 P.3d 1100, 1110 (Cal. 2005), arbitration contracts with class-action waivers were per se unconscionable, and, because unconscionability was a generally applicable contract defense, they were unenforceable pursuant to the FAA’s savings clause. Concepcion, 563 U.S. at 340–41.

Rejecting plaintiff’s claim, the Supreme Court pointed out that several of the benefits of arbitration that support the FAA’s protection of arbitration agreements are not present in class-wide arbitration. Accordingly, “[r]equiring the availability of class-wide arbitration interferes with fundamental attributes of arbitration and thus creates a scheme inconsistent with the FAA.” Id. at 344. Because California’s Discover Bank doctrine purported to require the availability of class-wide arbitration, it had an impermissible disproportionate impact on arbitration. In the words of the Court, requiring class-wide arbitration “[stood] as an obstacle to the accomplishment and execution of the full purposes and objections of Congress [in the FAA].” Id. at 352. Accordingly, Discovery Bank’s prohibition on class action waivers in arbitration agreements was preempted by the FAA.¹⁴ Id. at 352. As the Fifth Circuit explained in D.R. Horton, this same fatal flaw exists whether the Board argues that claimants must be permitted to proceed on a class basis in arbitration, or must have the option of proceeding on a class basis in court in lieu of individual arbitration. See D.R. Horton, Inc. v. NLRB, 737 F.3d 344, 358–60 (2013).

Concepcion, therefore, precludes a finding that the Board’s D.R. Horton rule is saved by the FAA’s savings clause.

2. The NLRA Does Not Contain Any “Contrary Congressional Command” Sufficient to Override the FAA.

Nothing in the Act specifically prohibits class action waivers or arbitration agreements, and therefore, the NLRA also does not contain any “contrary congressional command” sufficient to override the FAA. Instead of any express or unambiguous language, the Board relies on language which, generally, affords a right to engage in concerted activity. As the Fifth Circuit aptly stated:

There is no argument that the NLRA’s text contains explicit language of a congressional intent to override the FAA. Instead, it is the general thrust of the NLRA—how it operates, its goal of equalizing bargaining power—from which the command potentially is found. For example, one of the NLRA’s purposes is to “protect[] the exercise by workers of full freedom of association ... for the purpose of negotiating the terms and conditions of their employment or other mutual aid or protection.” 29 U.S.C. § 151. Such general language is an insufficient congressional command, as much more explicit language has been rejected in the past.

¹⁴ CGC contends that because Discover Bank was a state-based rule and the NLRA is a federal statute, there can be no preemption in this case. However, similar principles of reconciliation apply between federal statutes. As explained in Concepcion above, the Supreme Court has nevertheless indicated that a general ban on class action waivers is contrary to the FAA’s policy favoring arbitration. Give the NLRB’s stretched interpretation of Section 7, any reconciliation between the two statutes should be resolved in favor of the FAA and the legality and enforceability of class action waivers.

Indeed, the text does not even mention arbitration. By comparison, statutory references to causes of action, filings in court, or allowing suits all have been found insufficient to infer a congressional command against application of the FAA. See CompuCredit, 132 S. Ct. [665,] 670–71 [(2012)]. Even explicit procedures for collective actions will not override the FAA. See Gilmer, 500 U.S. at 32, 111 S. Ct. 1647 (ADEA); Carter, 362 F.3d at 298 (FLSA). The NLRA does not explicitly provide for such a collective action, much less the procedures such an action would employ. 29 U.S.C. § 157. Thus, there is no basis on which to find that the text of the NLRA supports a congressional command to override the FAA.

D.R. Horton, Inc. v. NLRB, 737 F.3d 344, 360 (5th Cir. 2013) (footnote omitted).

As explained by the Fifth Circuit, the Supreme Court has on numerous occasions rejected the argument that various legislative provisions were a “contrary congressional command” that overrode the FAA, even though the statutes considered in those cases contained much more explicit congressional “commands” than the general provisions of the NLRA. In CompuCredit v. Greenwood, the Supreme Court held that there was no contrary congressional command in the federal Credit Repair Organization Act despite language requiring consumer disclosures to state “You have a right to sue a credit repair organization that violates the Credit Repair Organization Act” and a non-waiver provision stating “[a]ny waiver by any consumer of any protection provided by or any right of the consumer under this subchapter—(1) shall be treated as void; and (2) may not be enforced by any Federal or State court or any other person.” 132 S. Ct. 665, 668 (2012). In Rodriguez de Quijas v. Shearson/Am. Express, Inc., the Supreme Court held that the Securities Act of 1933, which provided in relevant part that any provision binding on any person to waive compliance with any provisions of that subchapter, did not override the FAA. 490 U.S. 477, 482 (1989). Nor did materially identical language in the Securities Exchange Act of 1934. Shearson/Am. Express, Inc. v. McMahon, 482 U.S. 220, 231–33 (1987).

Similarly, the Sherman Act, which bans “[e]very contract, combination . . . or conspiracy, in restraint of trade” was not a contrary congressional command sufficient to override the FAA.

Italian Colors, 133 S. Ct. 2304 (2013) (citing 15 U.S.C. § 1). In Italian Colors, the Supreme Court specifically considered whether an arbitration agreement’s class action waiver was lawful. The Court pointed out that “[t]he Sherman and Clayton acts make no mention of class actions. In fact, they were enacted decades before the advent of Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 23, which was designed to allow an exception to the usual rule that litigation is conducted by and on behalf of the individual named parties only.” Id. at 2309. Of course, the same is true of the NLRA. Interpreting its own precedent, the Supreme Court also acknowledged that “in [Gilmer v. Interstate/Johnson Lane], we had no qualms in enforcing a class waiver in an arbitration agreement even though the federal statute at issue, the [ADEA], expressly permitted collective actions.”¹⁵ Finally, the Italian Colors Court went on to uphold the validity of the class action waiver, stating, “The parties here agreed to arbitrate pursuant to that ‘usual rule,’ and it would be remarkable for a court to erase that expectation.” Id.

Like the aforementioned statutes, the NLRA does not contain any contrary congressional command to the FAA and, therefore, consistent with the Supreme Court’s recent decisions in Italian Colors, CompuCredit, and the other cases cited above, the conflict between the FAA and the Board’s recent reinterpretation of the NLRA with respect to class action waivers must be resolved in favor of arbitration.

¹⁵ The ADEA provides plaintiffs with the ability to bring a “collective action.” The collective action provision expressly and unambiguously provides a right to engage in collective litigation:

An action to recover [for violations of the statute] may be maintained against any employer . . . in any Federal or State court of competent jurisdiction by any one or more employees for and in behalf of himself or themselves and other employees similarly situated.

29 U.S.C. § 216(b). A clearer statement of congressional intent to permit an employee to engage in a collective action – in court – would be harder to imagine. Despite this clear pronouncement, the Supreme Court indicated it would have “no qualms” enforcing a class action waiver in an arbitration agreement.

D. Under the First Amendment, Employers have the Right to Enforce Arbitration Agreements Judicially.

Even accepting the Board's position that Section 7 creates a substantive right to engage in collective adjudication, the First Amendment entitles a litigant to seek redress from the courts with virtual impunity. In BE & K Construction Co. v. NLRB, the Supreme Court – rebuffing the Board's asserted authority to declare meritorious lawsuits unfair labor practices – concluded that the First Amendment protected all lawsuits except those that were both objectively baseless and subjectively motivated by an unlawful purpose. 536 U.S. 516, 531 (2002). By requiring that a lawsuit be “objectively baseless” to give up First Amendment protection, the Court did not merely shield successful suits, but also those suits that were unsuccessful so long as they were “reasonably based.” Id. at 528.

Respondent Corporation's Motion to Compel Arbitration and its argument that the arbitration agreements were enforceable were not “objectively baseless.” When Plaintiff's Motion to Compel was filed, federal appellate authority had nearly unanimously rejected the Board's rulings in D.R. Horton and Murphy Oil.¹⁶ Indeed, at least one court in the Middle District of Florida (where Plaintiffs' Lawsuit was filed) had rejected the Board's D.R. Horton analysis. De Oliveira v. Citicorp N. Am., Inc., No. 8:12-cv-251-T-26TGW, 2012 WL 1831230, at *2 (M.D. Fla. 2012). Moreover, in its Motion to Compel Arbitration, Respondent Corporation only requested that the federal court enforce the Arbitration Agreement and, despite the terms of the class action waiver, Respondent Corporation did not expressly request that the Court order individual arbitration.

¹⁶ As of August 20, 2015, the date when Respondent Corporation filed its Motion to Compel Arbitration, the Second, Fifth, Eighth, and Ninth Circuits had either disapproved of or cast doubt on the Board's D.R. Horton analysis. D.R. Horton, Inc. v. NLRB, 737 F.3d 1018 (5th Cir. 2013) (rejecting the Board's reasoning and declining to enforce the NLRB's petition for enforcement); Richards v. Ernst & Young, 744 F.3d 1072, 1075 n. 3 (9th Cir. 2013) (expressly reserving the issue but “not[ing] that the two courts of appeals, and the overwhelming majority of the district courts, to have considered the issue have determined that they should not defer to the [Board's] decision in D.R. Horton”); Sutherland v. Ernst & Young LLP, 726 F.3d 290, 297 n. 8 (2d Cir. 2013) (“Like the Eighth Circuit, however, we decline to follow the decision in D.R. Horton.”); Owen v. Bristol Care, Inc., 702 F.3d 1050, 1053–54 (8th Cir. 2013) (describing D.R. Horton as carrying “little persuasive authority” in that case, and stating that “nearly all” district courts had rejected D.R. Horton); see also Murphy Oil U.S.A. Inc. v. NLRB, 808 F.3d 1013, 1018 (5th Cir. October 26, 2015) (reiterating its rejection of the NLRB's D.R. Horton decision); Walthour v. Chipio Windshield Repair, LLC, 745 F.3d 1326, 1336 (11th Cir. 2014) (finding an arbitration agreement with a class action waiver was lawful because the FLSA did “not set forth a non-waivable substantive right to a collective action.”).

In Murphy Oil, the Board relies on Bill Johnson's Restaurants v. NLRB for the proposition that the First Amendment does not protect an employer's right to petition to enforce an arbitration agreement where "a suit . . . has an objective that is illegal under federal law." 461 U.S. 731, 737 n. 5 (1983)). However, no evidence was presented in the Joint Motion and Stipulated Record that Respondent's objective was to engage in illegal activity, and it is improper for the Board to infer such a motive, especially where numerous courts likewise questioned the Board's rationale in D.R. Horton and Murphy Oil.

The Board's contention that an employer's efforts are unlawful under Bill Johnson's because it has the illegal objective of seeking to enforce an unlawful contract provision is a circular argument that is logically flawed. In essence, the Board presumes that the employers' conduct will be found to be unlawful, and then imputes to the employer prior knowledge of that outcome to support its contention that the employer's objective must have been illegal. Under the Board's interpretation, every legal argument presented in litigation that questions Board jurisprudence (both settled and unsettled) would have an illegal "objective." Essentially, the Board's holding is intended to chill employers from asserting their legal rights in court, which is precisely what the First Amendment is intended to protect and why the heightened standard in BE & K Construction and Bill Johnson's Restaurants was established.

E. Section 9(a) of the Act Protects' Employees' Rights to Adjust Grievances Individually.

Under Section 9(a) of the Act, "any individual employee or group of employees shall have the right at any time to present grievances to their employer and to have such grievances adjusted, without the intervention of the bargaining representative, as long as the adjustment is not inconsistent with the terms of a collective-bargaining contract or agreement then in effect” 29 U.S.C. § 159(a). The rights provided in Section 9(a) are also reinforced by Section 7, which protects each employee’s right to “refrain from” exercising the collective rights enumerated therein. 29 U.S.C. § 157. Thus, the right of employees to resolve their disputes individually encompasses agreement as to procedures that will govern the adjustment of grievances (including not to resolve those grievances collectively), and, even assuming that the Act did create a substantive right to class adjudication of non-NLRA disputes, employees have a right not to have their claims pursued on a class-wide basis. Accordingly, employees can agree to resolve their claims on an “individual,” rather than a class-wide basis, which is precisely what Respondents’ employees did when they agreed to the class action waiver in the Arbitration Agreement.

F. The Doctrines of Res Judicata, Collateral Estoppel, Laches, and/or Waiver Preclude any Re-Evaluation by the ALJ of the Federal Court’s Determination that the Arbitration Agreement is Valid and Enforceable.

Res judicata, also commonly referred to as “claim preclusion,” dictates that a final judgment¹⁷ on the merits will bar future claims by parties or their privies based on the same cause of action. McDonnell Douglas Corp., 270 NLRB 1204, 1207–08 (1984). Similarly, collateral estoppel commonly referred to as “issue preclusion,” precludes litigation of an issue based on a different cause of action in a second action, if that issue was litigated in, and necessary to, the decision in the first action. Id. As the Supreme Court has explained “[a] fundamental precept of common-law adjudication, embodied in the related doctrines of collateral estoppel and res judicata, is that a right, question or fact distinctly put in issue and directly determined by a court of competent jurisdiction ... cannot be disputed in a subsequent suit between the same parties or their privies” Montana v. United States, 440 U.S. 147, 153–154 (1979) (internal citations omitted); Sabine Towing & Transportation Co., 263 NLRB 114, 120 (1982) (reiterating Montana v. United States). Application of these principles is central to the purpose for which civil courts have been established, the conclusive resolution of disputes within their jurisdiction, and precluding parties from contesting matters that they have had a full and fair opportunity to litigate protects their adversaries from the expense and vexation of attending multiple lawsuits, conserves judicial resources, and fosters reliance on judicial action by minimizing the possibility of inconsistent decisions.¹⁸ Sabine Towing, 263 NLRB at 120.

¹⁷ Respondent appreciates that as of the date of submission of its trial brief, a final decision has not yet been made, but it respectfully reserves the right to supplement the record when a final decision is made. Respondent raises this argument at this stage to preserve its right to appeal this issue. See Murphy Oil U.S.A., Inc. v. NLRB, 808 F.3d 1013, 1017–18 (5th Cir. 2015) (finding that respondent waived its collateral estoppel defense by not sufficiently pressing those arguments before the Board).

The standard for establishing the preclusive effect of an earlier holding are:

First, the same issue now being raised must have been contested by the parties and submitted for judicial determination in the prior case. Second, the issue must have been actually and necessarily determined by a court of competent jurisdiction in that prior case.... Third, preclusion in the second case must not work a basic unfairness to the party bound by the first determination.

Beverly Health and Rehab Servs., Inc. v. NLRB, 317 F.3d 316, 322 (D.C. Cir. 2003) (internal citations omitted).

¹⁸ The NLRA purportedly strives to achieve similar goals: “The aim of the [NLRA] is to attain simplicity and directness both in the administrative procedure and on judicial review,” including “to avoid ‘unnecessary duplication of proceedings,’ and to adhere to the goal of obtaining a just result with a minimum of technical requirements” to avoid “undesirable circuit shopping and useless proliferation of judicial effort,” and “the prompt determination of labor disputes.” Int’l Union, United Auto. Aerospace and Agr. Implement Workers of America AFL-CIO v. Scofield, 382 U.S. 205, 211–13 (1965).

Similarly, the doctrines of laches¹⁹ and waiver²⁰ are equitable doctrines under which a party loses the right to adjudicate his or her claims by unreasonably sitting on those claims. All four principles – res judicata, collateral estoppel, laches, and waiver – are applicable in this case where a federal District Court has already ruled on the enforceability of the Agreement at issue, and Plaintiffs, Charging Party, and CGC had every opportunity, but choose not to, make the argument in opposition to the Motion to Compel Arbitration that the Arbitration Agreement was unlawful pursuant to the NLRA before the District Court issued its Order enforcing Charging Party’s Arbitration Agreement.

Charging Party filed his initial Charge on July 25, 2015, nearly a month after he had filed a notice to opt into the Lawsuit. (GCX-1(a); JX-1 at ¶ 21). Thereafter, Respondent Corporation filed the Motion to Compel Arbitration approximately a month later, on August 20, 2015. (GCX-1(g)). Charging Party’s counsel also represents the two named Plaintiffs in the Lawsuit, and although Respondent Corporation briefly addressed the NLRB’s holdings in D.R. Horton and Murphy Oil in its Motion to Compel Arbitration, neither Plaintiffs nor Charging Party ever argued in Opposition to the Motion to Compel that the Arbitration Agreement was unlawful under the NLRA. (JX-1 at ¶ 25; JX-10 at 8; JX-12).

Likewise, CGC was aware that Respondent Corporation sought to enforce arbitration well before the District Court rendered its decision on the Motion to Compel Arbitration. In its original Complaint, dated November 30, 2015, the General Counsel asserted that Respondent Corporation filed a Motion to Compel Arbitration in the Lawsuit on August 20, 2015. (GCX-

¹⁹ Black’s Law Dictionary defines laches as an “[t]he equitable doctrine by which a court denies relief to a claimant who has unreasonably delayed in asserting the claim, when that delay has prejudiced the party against whom relief is sought.” BLACK’S LAW DICTIONARY 891 (8th ed. 1999).

²⁰ Waiver is defined as “[t]he voluntary relinquishment or abandonment – express or implied – of a legal right or advantage.” BLACK’S LAW DICTIONARY 1611 (8th ed. 1999).

1(g) at ¶ 5(c)). It is clear, therefore, that, at the very latest, CGC knew as of November 30, 2015 (though likely sooner) that a question regarding the enforceability of the Arbitration Agreement was pending before the District Court. Although the District Court did not rule on the Motion to Compel Arbitration until July 1, 2016, for nearly seven months after the CGC knew the Motion to Compel Arbitration was pending, CGC never sought to intervene²¹ in the Lawsuit and Charging Party never sought to amend or supplement the Response in Opposition to the Motion to Compel to include arguments that either D.R. Horton or Murphy Oil were applicable. (JX-1 at ¶ 27–28; JX-14; JX-15). Moreover, Plaintiffs never objected to the Magistrate Judge’s Report and Recommendation on Respondents’ Motion to Compel Arbitration. (JX-15 at 1).

Presumably, CGC did not intervene so that it (and Charging Party) could take a second bite at the apple (despite the Agreement’s provision that the enforceability of the Agreement must be determined by a court), in their preferred forum and place Respondents in the untenable predicament of potentially having inconsistent orders regarding the enforceability of its Arbitration Agreement and the class action waiver contained therein. Because (1) Charging Party never raised any argument in response to the Motion to Compel Arbitration that the Arbitration Agreement was unenforceable under the NLRA; (2) CGC never sought to intervene in the Lawsuit to assert its alleged interest in enforcing the Act;²² and (3) the District Court has ²¹ Rule 24 of the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure provided CGC with ample opportunity to seek to intervene in the Federal Court litigation arguably either as a matter of right or by permission. Fed. R. Civ. P. 24(b) (“On timely motion, the court may permit a federal or state governmental officer or agency to intervene if a party’s claim or defense is based on: (A) a statute or executive order administered by the officer or agency; or (B) any regulation, order, requirement, or agreement issued or made under the statute or executive order.”).

²² Respondents recognize that in the past the Board has, on occasion, concluded that the General Counsel is not precluded from litigating an issue involving the enforcement of federal law that a private party has litigated unsuccessfully when the Government was not a party to the private litigation. However that rule has been rejected by two circuit courts. NLRB v. Donna-Lee Sportswear, 836 F.2d 31, 35 (1st Cir. 1987) (finding privity between the NLRB and charging party and applying issue preclusion despite Board’s absence as a named party in district court action); NLRB v. Heyman, 431 F.2d 796 (9th Cir. 1976) (“[t]he Board’s authority, however, does not extend in the first instance to contract litigation, nor does the Board itself have requisite jurisdiction, as would a court of appeals, to waive a judicial doctrine such as res judicata.”). In addition, the application of such a rule seems misplaced in a now issued an Order finding that the Arbitration Agreement is valid and enforceable and has ordered Charging Party to pursue his claims in arbitration, both CGC and Charging Party cannot now assert that the Arbitration Agreement is unlawful under the NLRA and, pursuant to the doctrines of res judicata, collateral estoppel, waiver, and laches, they are bound by the District Court's Order that the Arbitration Agreement was lawful and enforceable.²³ See e.g. Nevada Comm'n on Ethics v. Carrigan, 564 U.S. 117, 128–29 (2011) (“arguments thus omitted are normally considered waived”).

G. The Remedies Sought in the Complaint Are Inappropriate.

In the Complaint, CGC seeks the following remedies:

an Order requiring Respondent to: rescind all [Arbitration Agreements]; notify all applicants and current and former employees who signed the Agreement in any form, and/or with respect to whom the Agreement in any form has been maintained at any time since October 1, 2013, that the Agreement has been rescinded; reimburse [Charging Party] and his fellow plaintiffs for reasonable attorneys' fees and litigation expenses that they may have incurred in opposing Respondent's efforts to enforce the Agreement; and post and electronically distribute a notice to all employees and at all locations of Respondent in the United States and its territories where the Agreement has been maintained. The General Counsel further seeks all other relief as may be just and proper to remedy the unfair labor practices alleged.

(GCX-1(t) at ¶ 10).²⁴ Although Section 10(c) of the Act empowers the Board to remedy unfair labor practices by taking “such affirmative action including reinstatement of employees with or situation such as this, where the specific remedy requested by the CGC is to vacate a federal court order (see Section IV. G. below).

²³ On a related note, should the ALJ enter any remedial order, such order should be inapplicable to the Lawsuit filed in District Court because, in that lawsuit, Plaintiffs allege violations of the FLSA, and the Eleventh Circuit and the Supreme Court have both indicated that class action waivers are lawful under the FLSA and the ADEA. Walthour v. Chipio Windshield Repair, LLC, 745 F.3d 1326, 1336–37 (11th Cir.), cert. denied, 134 S. Ct. 2886 (2014); Italian Colors, 133 S. Ct. 2304, 2311 (2013) (Interpreting its precedent in Gilmer v. Interstate/Johnson Lane, 500 U.S. 20 (1991) to permit class action waivers under the ADEA).

²⁴ Although in other cases where D.R. Horton and its progeny are considered, the Board has ordered respondents to withdraw a pending motion to compel and/or to move to vacate an order compelling arbitration, CGC has not requested that remedy in this case. Therefore, Respondents do not specifically address the impropriety of such a remedy, but respectfully request the opportunity to respond if CGC proposes such a remedy in his post-trial brief.

without back pay, as will effectuate the policies of the Act,” the remedies that the CGC seeks in this case are far from the ordinary remedies usually asserted, and for the reasons stated below are, for the most part, inappropriate remedies in this case.

1. Pursuant to the Arbitration Agreement’s Severability Clause, other Aspects of the Arbitration Agreement Should Be Enforced Even if the Class Action Waiver is Determined to be Unlawful.

In the Complaint, CGC requests that the ALJ order Respondents to rescind all versions of the Arbitration Agreement in their entirety. However, this requested remedy ignores entirely that the Arbitration Agreement has a severability clause and, under the FAA, the existence of an unlawful provision in an arbitration agreement does not render the agreement to arbitrate unenforceable.

The Arbitration Agreement specifically provides that it will only be enforced “[t]o the maximum extent permitted by law,” (JX-2 at 1, subsection 2), and its severability clause provides that “[i]f any court of competent jurisdiction finds any part or provision of this Agreement void, voidable, or otherwise unenforceable, such a finding will not affect the validity of the remainder of the Agreement and all other parts and provisions will remain in full force and effect.” (JX-2 at 3). Similarly, the Supreme Court iterated in Rent-A-Center, West, Inc. v. Jackson, that “[a]s a matter of substantive federal arbitration law, an arbitration provision is severable from the remainder of the contract.” 561 U.S. 63, 70–71 (2010). In Rent-A-Center, the Supreme Court explained that because “Section 2 [of the FAA] states that a ‘written provision’ ‘to settle by arbitration a controversy’ is ‘valid, irrevocable, and enforceable’ without mention of the validity of the contract in which it is contained” “[a] party’s challenge to another provision of the contract, or to the contract as a whole, does not prevent a court from enforcing a specific agreement to arbitrate.” 561 U.S. 63, 70–71 (2010) (“Thus, in an employment contract many elements of alleged unconscionability applicable to the entire contract (outrageously low wages, for example) would not affect the agreement to arbitrate alone.”).

Thus, even assuming that the ALJ finds that the Agreement contained an unlawful class action waiver, Supreme Court precedent requires that the lawful provisions of the Agreement, including the agreement to arbitrate, must be enforced. An order to rescind the entire agreement would conflict with Rent-A-Center, and would be improperly punitive. See NLRB v. Fort Vancouver Plywood Co., 604 F.2d 596, 602 (9th Cir. 1979) (Under the NLRA, “[r]emedies that award employees more than they would have obtained but for the violations are punitive, not compensatory, and thus improper.”). Therefore, even if the class action waiver is found to be unlawful, CGC’s request that Respondents be ordered to rescind the Arbitration Agreements in their entirety should be denied.

2. Any Remedial Order Should Be Limited to Non-Supervisory Employees.

Assuming that the ALJ orders Respondents to rescind the Arbitration Agreements, the Order should be limited to non-supervisory employees. It is well-established under Board law that supervisors are expressly excluded from coverage under the NLRA. 29 U.S.C. §§ 152(3) and (11). Nevertheless, CGC has requested that Respondents be ordered to rescind all versions of the Arbitration Agreement, which includes agreements that have been signed by supervisors and other management employees. Respondent respectfully requests that any order be limited to agreements signed by “employees” as that term is defined under the Act, and Respondents should not be required to rescind all Arbitration Agreements.

3. Neither Charging Party Nor the Plaintiffs In the Federal Court Litigation Should Be Awarded Any Attorneys’ Fees or Litigation Expenses for Opposing Respondent’s Class Action Waiver.

It is not an appropriate remedy to require Respondents to pay Charging Party or Plaintiffs’ attorneys fees’ incurred in opposition to Respondent’s Motion to Compel Arbitration because the lawsuit was not based on any retaliatory motive and it did not lack any reasonable basis. See Section IV. D., supra. In this case there is no evidence that Respondents' Motion was motivated by any hostility based on the exercise of NLRA-protected rights. In addition, Respondents filed a meritorious motion that was granted by the district court so it could hardly be considered to lack any reasonable basis, especially given the overwhelming number of courts that disagreed with the Board's analysis at the time. Moreover, the Board would be ordering an award of attorneys' fees in a legal proceeding to which it was not a party and over which it has no jurisdiction.

Even assuming that an award for attorney fees' incurred in the District Court lawsuit could be considered an appropriate remedy under the NLRA (which Respondents contend it is not), neither Charging Party nor the Plaintiff should be awarded any attorney fees' or litigation expenses for opposing Respondent's Motion to Compel Arbitration. Specifically, there is no evidence that either Charging Party or the Plaintiffs in the Lawsuit incurred any attorneys' fees or litigation expenses for opposing the class or collective action waiver in the Arbitration Agreement. To the contrary, the main issues raised by Plaintiffs in their Opposition to the Motion to Compel Arbitration was whether arbitration should be compelled at all and specifically, whether they had signed the Arbitration Agreement. (JX-12 at 8–9). Nowhere in the Motion to Compel Arbitration did Respondent Corporation argue that Plaintiffs must arbitrate their claims on an individual basis. (JX-10). Although Respondent Corporation's Motion to Compel briefly addressed D.R. Horton and Murphy Oil, it did not ask the Court to order the parties to individual arbitration. (JX-10). Likewise, in Opposition to the Motion to Compel Plaintiffs never argued that the Arbitration Agreement was unenforceable under the NLRA or that D.R. Horton or Murphy Oil was applicable. (JX-12). Thus, there is no reason to believe that Charging Party or the Plaintiffs incurred any expense whatsoever for opposing the class or collective action waiver in the Arbitration Agreement, and, as explained in Section IV. D. above, it was perfectly lawful for Respondent Corporation to seek to compel enforcement of its employees' agreements to arbitrate.

VI. CONCLUSION

Supreme Court precedent bars consideration of the Arbitration Agreement because the Agreement expressly delegates to courts the authority to determine the enforceability of the Agreement. Alternatively, the Arbitration Agreement must be enforced for the several other reasons explained above. If any aspect of the Agreement is found to be unenforceable, the remainder of the Agreement should be enforced according to its terms.

As explained above, Respondents also effectively rescinded the allegedly unlawful solicitation policy, and the Board does not contend that the current policy is unlawful.

Accordingly, Respondents respectfully submits that the Complaint should be dismissed in its entirety.

This 7th day of October 2016.

Submitted by: Nicole B. Dunlap
Shane T. Muñoz
Florida Bar No. 67024
smunoz@fordharrison.com

Nicole Bermel Dunlap
Florida Bar No. 116158
ndunlap@fordharrison.com

FORDHARRISON LLP
101 E. Kennedy Boulevard, Suite 900
Tampa, Florida 33602-5133
Telephone: (813) 261-7800
Facsimile: (813) 261-7899

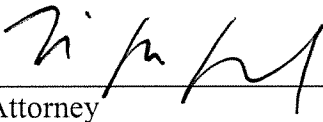

Attorneys for TBC Corporation and TBC Retail Group, Inc.

CERTIFICATE OF SERVICE

I HEREBY CERTIFY that the foregoing was filed electronically with the Administrative Law Judge at www.nlr.gov and was duly served electronically upon the following named individuals on this 7th day of October, 2016:

Dallas L. Manuel, II
Counsel for the General Counsel
National Labor Relations Board, Region 12
Fifth Third Center, Suite 530
201 E. Kennedy Blvd.
Tampa, FL 33602
dallas.manuel@nlrb.gov

Bernard Mazaheri
Morgan & Morgan
20 N. Orange Ave., Suite 1600
Orlando, FL 32801
bmazaheri@forthepeople.com

/s/Attorney